

CHILD-BRIGHT's Guidelines for Patient-Partner Compensation and Recognition

The purpose of these guidelines is to support the contribution of patient-partners in research, governance and other activities as a member of CHILD-BRIGHT. 'Patient-partners' includes people with lived experience involved in research projects, program committees and other network activities as patients (children, youth, and adults living with a brain-based developmental disability) and/or parents, caregivers, or family members of children, youth and adults living with a brain-based developmental disability.

Patient-partners involved in CHILD-BRIGHT's network activities will be offered compensation in recognition of their contributions.

For each fiscal year, compensation is paid twice yearly, in November and in May. Patient-partners may choose not to be compensated.

Project coordinators and committee chairs must submit annual compensation expectations, including a list of patient-partners, by May 1 of each fiscal year. For example, for fiscal year 2022 (the fiscal year that runs April 1 of the previous calendar year to March 31 of the closing year) requests should be submitted by May 1, 2022.

*Should any patient-partners or activities (for which patient-partners will be compensated) be added to a project or committee plan after May 1, please advise CHILD-BRIGHT immediately.

All requests, questions or concerns can be sent to CHILD-BRIGHT's Citizen Engagement Program Coordinator at citizen.engagement@child-bright.ca.

In order for patient-partners to make an informed choice to participate, research leaders and committee chairs should provide the best estimate of time and effort required specific to the project or committee. Expectations of attendance and contribution, as well as financial considerations and designated compensation should also be communicated in advance of the start of the patient-partner's activity with the project or committee.

Suggested compensation amounts are described in the table below. The amounts reflect the estimated level of engagement required for these different activities.

Role	Commitment	Responsibility	Scope	Suggested Compensation

Engaging children under 10 years of age	For example, reviewing an assent form or interview questions for young children	Should be kept short and reasonable for the age of the individual	Project level	$20 per task (minimum $15 per hour) in gift cards

*In cases where a patient-partner in a project contributes substantially more over the course of a year than is described under “Commitment” and “Responsibility” in the first row, compensation should be calculated at approximately $30 per hour for the additional work up to a maximum of $600 additionally per year. If the project and the patient-partner agree that the patient-partner’s role and contribution should be compensated at an amount greater than $1,200 per year, the amount over $1,200 should be paid from the project’s budget.

Patient-partner and/or the researcher must get approval for these activities from the CHILD-BRIGHT Executive Committee prior to the event, or the payment may not be made.

When engaging children under 10 years of age, consider how the parents will be supporting their child to engage. You may need to consider payment to parents for travel and/or for their role as a support person during meetings depending on the circumstances.

CHILD-BRIGHT suggests a rate of $30 per hour as a guideline for compensation for roles outside of those listed here. Please connect and discuss compensation with patient-partners before the work begins to ensure the expectations are clear on both sides. Any amounts paid by the CHILD-BRIGHT Network not in budget forecasts should be cleared with the Citizen Engagement Program Director before offers are made.

Travel, childcare, and support person expenses

Travel expenses (e.g., airfare, ground transportation, hotel, food) that are reasonable and necessary for participation in CHILD-BRIGHT Network-wide activities such as the annual meeting or face-to-face committee meetings) will be covered in line with the reimbursement policies of the host institution for the project or program administering the patient-partner’s activities. Included in these expenses are those incurred by parents to provide care for their children while they engage in project and network activities.

CHILD-BRIGHT will reimburse patient-partners $15-20 per hour for childcare or support person costs, up to a maximum of $500 per event. If needed, please consult with the Citizen Engagement Program if your childcare or support person costs exceed this amount. Patient-partners must submit a request for reimbursement for travel and childcare/support person costs in advance of the event and for receipts (or other appropriate documentation) after the event.

Compensation for these activities, if pre-approved, will be covered by the CHILD-BRIGHT Network (central office budget).

Note: Patient-partners should be advised that compensation (including money and/or gift cards) received as compensation or recognition of their participation in network activities are subject to relevant tax laws and must be reported on both federal and provincial tax forms. Research leaders or committee chairs should inform patient-partners that compensation has the potential to impact a patient's financial situation and inform them that it is their responsibility (the patient-partner's responsibility) to determine whether payment is the right fit for them.

Note: Patient-partners cannot request payment from CHILD-BRIGHT if they work for an organization that also pays them for those same hours worked.

These guidelines are reviewed and updated by the CHILD-BRIGHT Citizen Engagement Council, the NYAP and the Network Steering Committee yearly, at a minimum.

Considerations in patient-partner recognition

In addition to compensation, research leaders and committee chairs should also carefully consider what recognition would be appropriate for their patient-partners (e.g., named on grant applications, websites, presentations, and research articles).

It is also important for research leaders and committee chairs to clearly inform patient-partners that anonymity may not be possible when being part of a research team, unlike when they are a participant in a research project. Being a member of a research team means patient-partner names will be included in grant applications and on project materials, as many grants, competitions, and even scientific journals require patient engagement.

Note: Patient-partners should consider this carefully as public recognition may open up ethical implications for their family, since it often reveals personal health information about their child or family. Research leaders and committee chairs should keep track of where patient-partners agree to have their names released and should collect consent prior to publishing or disclosing any details shared by the patient-partner about their family or personal journey.

When discussing certain recognition activities, research leaders and committee chairs should ensure that patient-partners understand what additional work may be required and understand if that work will be compensated. For example, being named as an author in a research article requires following strict journal authorship guidelines, including giving feedback on drafts and reviewing and approving the final version.

As with most work with patient-partners, preferences may vary widely between partners, so research leaders and committee chairs must ensure to collect consent and keep channels of communication open.
